Inspiring, training and supporting teachers working in marginalised communities
About Mobile Education Partnerships

MEP is a specialist educational charity working in communities affected by war, poverty and neglect.

It was built from scratch by practicing teachers and is dedicated to providing high quality professional support at ‘grassroots’ level based on teacher partnerships which bring together the best of East and West.

Since 2011 MEP has been directly involved in the training of almost 2000 teachers, produced text books now used by up to 18,000 refugee children and in partnership with Harrow International School, Bangkok, has taken 414 teachers through Cambridge exams. It has strong links with Cambridge University and has developed a sustainable, transferable model of teacher training using mobile units of local trainers.

Will Millard, MEP Patron and BBC documentary maker, comments on the work of the charity.

“The pioneering spirit at the heart of the Mobile Education Partnership (MEP) and their remarkable tenacity in establishing teacher training facilities and educational resources within Myanmar, and on the Thai-Myanmar border, makes me extremely proud to be named as their Patron.

The innovative use of mobile teacher training units to establish a core of locally trained teachers with internationally recognised qualifications and an education of the highest quality, has exponentially improved the quality of life of those who have received teacher training, allowing them in turn to educate children within their own communities, who almost certainly would not have received any formal education otherwise.

Through my work as both a BBC Television presenter and as an expedition leader it is abundantly, and tragically, clear that communities that do not gain opportunities to receive an education represent some of the most vulnerable people on earth.

Chair’s Comments

2018/19 has seen another raft of steady but secure achievements for MEP to celebrate. In particular the Cambridge English results this year have been excellent.

The consistent high quality of the teaching in both Mae Sot and Myitkyina (by Zsofie Tajarni and Caroline Salvin) meant that some unexpected setbacks in the examinations process itself could not dent the enthusiasm and determination of the students.

Many of the students are from very challenging backgrounds with little opportunity to practise their English, such as the rural communities of Kachin, or Mae La refugee camp and it is to their enormous credit that they have done so well. Also, adding to the quality of what is on offer is the beginnings of a embryonic short term volunteer programme. This year a retired ex teacher went to Myitkyina to work with the students for two to three weeks in a schedule designed specifically to support them.

We hope to expand this kind of structured volunteering in a way which will enhance the experience for students and volunteers.

Inevitably the reputation of MEP has spread into the nearby regions, and requests have already come from Chin State amongst other areas, to help them set up some basic teacher training initiatives in the most remote locations.

Most of the areas that want our help are areas where education has suffered over recent years, and this is work to which MEP feels extremely committed.

We hope very much to be able to take up some of these opportunities, and we feel some confidence in the fact that local organisations want to start working in partnership with us. We are keen to ensure that those organisations tell us what they need.

We also take confidence from the fact that people who have worked with us in previous years want to continue working with us such as Harrow International School in Bangkok, while others would like to come back and use their experiences with us to help others. Rob Gordon for example, who has twice worked with us in the past, in Mae Sot and Mai Ja Yang will be returning as Education Liaison Officer to help new staff and volunteers to settle in and work as effectively as possible whatever they choose to do.
2018-19 has been a difficult year for Burma. MEP has continued its work with the Karen, Kachin, Mon and Burman groups in situations which receive little international coverage.

The Rohingya crisis has received much media coverage showing that it is partly a result of the aggressive nationalism that has been instigated and nurtured by various bodies within the country.

However, the plight of the Rohingyas is only part of an ongoing conflict within the country that gave rise to the work of this charity over twenty years ago. There are now nearly 100,000 people displaced in Kachin State where armed conflict continues. The same situation is found in Shan State. The 130,00 Karen refugees on the Thai/Burma border are reluctant to return because of increased fighting and general concerns about safety.

However, there are enlightened and progressive forces at work within the country. In the coming year it will be imperative that MEP continues to identify, partner and support these groups and individuals.

For example the monastic schools, with whom MEP works, do their very best to support families who have fallen victim to internal displacement, the Kachin Baptist Convention will be a key partner to MEP in providing training to mobile teams of teachers in war-torn Kachin State, the Burmese Migrant Associations whom we partner on the Thai border work to achieve the best standards possible in local education and the teachers in small refugee colleges such as Pu Taw, in Mae la camp, try to provide a better future for young people many of whom know little about life outside of a refugee camp.

Politically, there appears to be a regrouping of ethnic parties as they gear up for the 2020 elections. For example, in Kachin State the smaller local parties who fought the last elections are now consolidating into one ethnic Kachin party to contest the 2020 General Election.

The NLD and Aung San Suu Kyi, winners of the 2016 elections, have faced increasing criticism at home and abroad as they encounter the world of ‘realpolitik’. How the rise of ethnic parties will affect support for the NLD remains to be seen.
C.P. Snow said some sixty years ago, aid should be about people ‘ who will muck in as colleagues, who will pass on what they know, do an honest technical job, and get out.’

Over the years MEP has developed several models of teacher training which are transferable across a range of social and educational contexts.

Cambridge Certificates
A number of MEP projects allow local teachers, some with no recognised qualifications, to gain an internationally recognised Cambridge certificate. These are highly valued as they offer the prospect of better life chances for many teachers.

Cambridge Plus
This is MEP’s ‘Flagship’ project. Over three phases the project aims to establish local teams trained to deliver Cambridge Key English Test (KET) and teacher training. The much valued KET is an internationally accepted certificate which recognises achievement in English Language.

Attendance at the Cambridge classes allows exposure to new techniques and therefore creates ‘buy-in’ from local teachers and prospective trainers. In this way a sustainable local programme is established and MEP can refocus its attention elsewhere.

Basic Training/Subject specific training
MEP mobile training teams train up local teachers in basic classroom skills and, where requested, subject specific skills. Training is delivered to small groups on a weekly or fortnightly basis and trainers then follow up with in class support.

Establishing a mentor system
Within the basic training programme specific training can be given to senior/mentor teachers who can take on training of new staff when required.

Kachin State
Cambridge Plus Project
In August 2018 MEP began a three year project based in Myitkyina, Kachin State. The aims of the project are:
1. to provide Cambridge certificates and training to teachers in schools in Kachin State.
2. to establish a local training unit which can provide a sustainable programme of Cambridge KET training.

In 2018-19, 29 teachers and management and auxiliary staff from the education sector in Kachin State attended a Cambridge Key English Test (KET) course. Candidates came from communities across Kachin State, including those from IDP camps, to attend a Cambridge KET course. The course was delivered in the state capital Myitkyina.

For part-time students the course lasted 6 months and for full time attendees, four months. The part time students came from the Myitkyina area while the full-time students came from more remote parts of the state where schools serve some of the poorest sections of Kachin society.

The course was delivered by a very experienced teacher, Zsofi Tarjani, who had formerly worked for the British Council.

Exams were taken in March 2019 and delivered by examiners from the British Council in Mandalay. Harrow International School Bangkok generously provided candidate exam entry fees as well as the costs for delivering the exam in Myitkyina including examiner fees.

Further to this the MEP trainer provided a teacher training course for local teachers. As well as formal training sessions our trainer followed up but making classroom visits. This is a key element in all of MEP’s work.

Kachin Baptist Convention (KBC) training
In addition, MEP trainers making up the Mobile Training Unit which is required to work in different parts of the country delivered a training course to trainers of the Kachin Baptist Organisation (KBO). In turn the KBO trainers will train 40 Community Volunteer teachers who work in the most remote and inaccessible areas of Kachin State.
Migrant Teacher Training, Mae Sot, Thai/Burma border.

This project is funded by Safe Child Thailand. The aim of the project is to provide training for new teachers and for those who wish to improve their skills.

The course focused on:
- Classroom management
- Developing classroom materials
- Teaching and learning styles
- Lesson planning and structure
- Positive reinforcement

It must be noted that MEP provides group training for the above topics but our trainers form a mobile unit which provides regular follow-up in-class support. This is vital if new teachers are to develop skills and confidence and is a key element in the MEP model of teacher training.

For this project MEP has worked with 34 migrant learning centres supported BMTA and BMWEC (and a further 11 Help Without Frontiers schools funded separately). There are 54 teachers that completed the workshops, which equates to approximately 3400 children benefitting from the training.

24 teachers received regular follow-up in class support. Extending the project to remote schools and IDP schools. 37 additional teachers have attended the first of one-day workshop at IDP school inside Karen State and in Phop Phra town,
Mae La Refugee Camp
The project is funded by the Evan Cornish Foundation.

The aims of the project are:
1. to improve English Language levels amongst trainee refugee teachers and in-post migrant teacher
2. to develop teaching skills
3. to provide teachers and others with an internationally recognised certificate

The course focused on the delivery of the Cambridge Key English Test and involved 33 refugee and migrant teachers and trainees.

Caroline Salvin MEP’s Cambridge trainer 2018-19 writes about her experience in Mae La Camp. The project, aimed at providing internationally recognised certificates for refugee students, was supported by the Evan Cornish Foundation. In March 2019, 33 migrant and refugee students took Cambridge exams.

When I first arrived at Mae La Camp I had to ditch any preconceptions about refugee pretty quickly! In my defense, I, along with the almost entire British population, had only sensational news reports on the plight of refugees globally to inform my ideas.

My first pleasant impressions were of a leafy, sunny, almost idyllic mountain settlement. There is a sense of peace, calm and order in the area of the camp where I was fortunate enough to be teaching, due, I’ve no, in large part to the influence of the indefatigable Khu Paw and her team of refugee teachers.

My second impressions were equally heartening. A large room full of students, who had just been given a “test” by a western woman they had never seen before, sat diligently working, in silence and with obvious concentration without a single complaint! Given that my teaching background is in FE Colleges with sometimes recalcitrant teenage learners, you can understand why I felt that I’d stumbled upon a small miracle.

I am happy to say that my impressions did not change. The students, the environs, the staff, all of them contributed to my experience, making it one of the best I have ever had.

On leaving, Caroline commented:

The confidence they were acquiring in the classroom was obviously spilling out into their daily lives, and by the end of the course one of the girls, who had told me at the beginning that she was happy to settle for a life spent at home, confided that she now had ambitions to start her own business in selling handmade furniture.

She had given this a lot of thought and already had plans to tap into her grandparents’ knowledge of traditional bamboo crafts, as well as assuring me that she felt confident enough to deal with prospective buyers in English.

Many of the other students were equally ambitious for themselves, and were looking forward enthusiastically to applying for University and higher Education courses. I feel that this was the result of their increased self-confidence and indeed self-worth. I like to think that my mantras helped with this process.

An example of the response I always give to any student who doubts themselves and uses phrases like “I can’t do it” or “I’m no good at...” is to remember the little word “yet”.

There is no doubt in my mind that this course, with its prestigious Cambridge accreditation, is invaluable to these students.

They all feel privileged to have the chance to study for it, and they all take their learning very seriously. It would be a tragedy if we were prevented from bringing this opportunity to these refugee students for whatever reason, so I really hope that we can continue to enrich lives, build confidence and award certificates that enable young people to soar as they enter adult life.

Caroline Salvin
Harrow International School Bangkok

In 2018 Harrow International School, Bangkok won the British International Schools Award for its work with MEP.

In 2019, once again, Harrow provided vital support for the charity. Harrow sent a team of their students to meet the refugee students from Mae La Camp on what we have come to term as a ‘cultural exchange’.

These are invaluable events which bring young people from totally different backgrounds together and provide mutual enrichment. In addition Harrow sent a team of Cambridge qualified examiners to Mae Sot to assess the students and Harrow also kindly provided funding for all candidate entries in Mae Sot and Myitkyina and for the fees for examiners from the British Council to assess the students in Myitkyina.

Monastic Education in Myanmar

Although basic education is officially free in Myanmar, many families in marginalised and remote areas cannot afford the cost of essential items such as exercise books and stationery, uniforms and unexpected fees.

This means that government run schools remain inaccessible for children from the poorest sections of society. Monastic schools, providing free tuition, food and accommodation fill a significant gap in the education sector providing education primarily for children from migrant families, conflict areas and remote communities.

Monastic schools also provide valuable ethical education based on Buddhist teachings.

Monastic schools, which follow the government curriculum are established and managed by monks and administered through the Ministry of Religious Affairs. They are located in every state and region, and provide education for over 150,000 children

MEP has been involved in the training of monastic school teachers in Mon State, southern Burma, for several years.

8 Monastic Schools participated

Training focused on 1 key teacher per school. Initial training was provided in:
- Classroom management
- Teaching and learning styles
- Production of low cost materials
- Constructive questioning
- Assessment

The group training was followed up by weekly visits by a mobile trainer from MEP to support teacher development and delivery at classroom level.

The follow-up is essential if new skills are to be effectively developed.

Adu, the MEP mobile trainer, commented in his report:

‘A significant change has been the number of teachers showing growing confidence to practise the new techniques and strategies. Teachers are beginning to take risks and try out new ideas.’

‘Teachers are able to control the class properly by using simple strategies such as eye-contact to control behaviour, different grouping styles to encourage students’ participation and delivering lessons in more attractive ways to gain and maintain the learners’ interests.’

Short Term Volunteer Placements

MEP started almost 20 years ago as a purely volunteer based organisation giving short term courses in the Karen refugee camps.

In 2018 MEP revived this short term volunteer programme but with a focus on support for its long term projects.

Steve Newman, a retired secondary school head of history recently now retrained as an EL teacher, spent 2 weeks in Myitkyina Kachin State, supporting the MEP Cambridge Project delivered by Zsofi Tarjani. Here is Steve’s short report:

Wisdom Palace, February 2019

Heathrow, Bangkok, Yangon, Myitkyina… now that should have been the line in the old M People song “Pop Musik”. Myitkyina Airport distinctly small scale, but the “Mr Steve” sign held aloft by a teenage boy indicated that I was in the right place, at least.

I met Zsofi at Wun Tawp (hotel): she had been punctilious in responding to my emails and now she eased me smoothly into the teaching: 2 KET classes and 2 of Khun Seng’s. 21.5 hours in the first week, 25 in the second week never seemed onerous.

Lesson prep for the KET classes required little imagination, given the brief to stick closely to the textbook in preparation for the KET exam. The other 2 classes required more thought and input: a data stick with resources from home and a range of tourist and travel leaflets served well (even more so if any of the students ever go to Sunderland, which they now imagine is the garden city of the UK, an impression I did nothing to correct).

Wonderful students, with superb work ethic and learning strategies, great hospitality from Khun Seng and his family, and great support from Zsofi. Who could ask for more?

MEP is now looking for short term volunteers to support all its mainstream projects. We hope this will be a significant development in 2019-20
Durham University Charities Kommittee (DUCK) Summer School

The aim of this short project was to introduce a creative extra curricular activity through which students could begin to question how ‘reality’ can be interpreted through media representations according to author, purpose and audience. In addition the students could begin to learn how to use photography as a medium to present their own view of their world.

In September 2018 12 students from Durham University travelled to Thailand to deliver a ‘summer school’ for MEP. Over a number of years DUCK (Durham University Rag) has supported the work of MEP on the Thai border and this was an opportunity for their ‘Thailand Expedition’ team to actually participate in our programme.

MEP has for many years wanted to extend its work into other areas of communication and education and the Durham students enabled this to happen by delivering a unit on photography to children in 7 migrant schools.

This was the first time that such a project had been carried out in this area and was a welcome extra-curricular activity for the Burmese pupils.

It turned out to be hugely successful with the Durham students warming to their role as instructors and the Burmese pupils quickly picking up rules of composition and some useful techniques for creating images which capture much of their everyday lives.

Broadening the Programme and Transforming MEP 2019-2020

In December 2019 MEP, due largely to the efforts of its new Funding Manager, out of 500 applicants was awarded a grant from the Fore to transform the charity.

Support from The Fore will help us develop the capacity of the charity as well as increasing the scope and impact of our programmes.

Here are some of the elements of that transformation:

1. Expanding the scope of the programme - a transferable model

The MEP model of training has been developed over a number of years and has been applied effectively in a range of circumstances. Our identity is built on working with communities suffering the effects of poverty, neglect and conflict. With all of this in mind we are looking to use this transferable model in other parts of Burma and possibly elsewhere in the world. We are currently looking at opportunities to work with the Rohingya in Bangladesh and the Chin in northern Burma as well as continuing projects with the Kachin, Karen, Burmans and Mon.

2. Broadening the content and increasing impact.

In addition, we are looking to broaden the content of the programme to include courses which lead to entry to further education institutions. These could include IELTS (International English Language Testing System) and/or similar. This would be a major contribution to the lives of the young people in those marginalised communities in which we work.

At the same time we will continue to provide teacher training alongside Cambridge KET and PET courses with the addition of the Teaching Knowledge Test (TKT). This is an internationally recognised teaching qualification which is much sought after by local teachers.

A critical understanding of the media is important in democratic life.

Short courses based on critical thinking skills especially linked to textual analysis and production in various media are planned.

4. Staff development

MEP’s Programme Director for Thailand & Myanmar, Wai Mar Phyo, recently gained a Cambridge Assessment English CELTA (Certificate in Teaching English to Speakers of Other Languages)

This will be invaluable to our work as it will add to the capacity of MEP to provide high quality in-house staff development, general teacher training and delivery of Cambridge exams.

5. Developing Financial Stability

The Fore grant has allowed MEP to bring in an experienced Funding Manager. Julie Anne Smith has over 20 years experience of working with NGOs and will be building and diversifying the fundraising capacity of MEP and raising awareness of our work more widely, including on social media.

Social Enterprises

As part of MEP’s strategy to strengthen its long-term organisational capacity, we are currently looking at establishing social enterprises in Mae Sot, Thailand and in Mawlamyine, Burma.

There is a great demand for Cambridge and other courses from those working in the private and public sectors in both of these areas. This is especially relevant as Mae Sot has been designated as an Economic Development Zone by the Thai government. MEP has recruited a specialist adviser to help us to develop this initiative which can be adapted to local circumstances.
05
Projects 2019-20

Kachin State
MEP will launch Phase 2 of the Cambridge Plus project in August 2019. It is expected that two Kachin interns will join the programme to form the nucleus of a Kachin Cambridge Teaching Unit. Throughout Phase 2 they will work alongside and MEP trainer to deliver the KET course to local Kachin teachers and, in so doing, develop vital teaching skills for the future.

Visits have been made to the area by a UK Director and the Programme Director (Myanmar). The project would involve the delivery of a Cambridge KET course and the development of a local unit of Chin trainers to work in the remote villages of the Chin Hills. It is likely that in late 2019 a ‘scoping’ visit will be made followed by a pilot project. At the time of writing MEP is launching an appeal for funding for this project.

Mon State
Chin State and in particular the Chin Hills region is possibly the most remote and isolated communities. MEP has secured funding to begin a Cambridge Plus and general training course in Monastic schools in the Mawlamyine area. MEP has much experience of working in this area within the monastic school system. At the same time as delivering Cambridge courses our project manager will be looking at an opportunity to develop a social enterprise in Mawlamyine to complement our charitable work.

Mae La Refugee Camp and Mae Sot Migrant Learning Centres
MEP will continue its work with Cambridge courses and teacher training in Mae La Karen Refugee Camp. MEP has developed a long standing relationship with Pu Taw Memorial Junior College.

Rohingya Refugee Camps Cox’s Bazar, Bangladesh
Over one million Rohingya have fled Myanmar in the wake of violence and oppression. They now live in refugee camps just inside Bangladesh. Conditions are very basic and lack of opportunities for education and its consequences are a serious concern. MEP has been asked by the Rohingya Education Development Association (REDA) to provide a preparatory course to help students gain a place at universities which specialize in supporting students from displaced communities. The Asian University for Women (AUW), Chittagong, is one such. University courses of this nature are generally delivered in English but also require a background in critical thinking skills and a broader knowledge of world affairs. MEP could provide an ‘IELTS Plus’ course to cover these requirements. In addition, lower level Cambridge courses and teacher training may be provided.
The legacy George left has provided financial stability for the charity and over the years will contribute to the improvement of the life chances of many people in marginalised communities. We will remember George with affection and gratitude and ensure that his memory is kept alive in the work of the charity.
